

LendEDU's Student Loan Debt by State by School Report 2016

Higher education is expensive. Really expensive..

Affording the rapidly rising cost of higher education isn't easy. Increasingly, students and families are using student loan debt to finance tuition, room & board, and other expenses.

Today, the majority of graduates are leaving campus with student debt. Over the last decade the average graduate's debt at graduation rose more than twice the rate of inflation.

In fact, the Class of 2016 was the most indebted class in history. There are now over 43 million Americans with student debt. Student borrowers choose to deal with this student debt in many ways. Some choose to consolidate federal student loans while other sign themselves up for an income-driven repayment programs. In fact, some borrowers just don't even pay their loans. This is especially troublesome for borrowers who have private student loans with high interest rates.

Student debt at graduation differs rather dramatically by college and by state. In our report we analysed financial aid data from over 1,000 colleges and universities in the United States. Our team spent roughly 50 hours aggregating and analyzing the data for this report.

We've broken down the student loan debt statistics for over 1,300 different colleges. Then we ranked the data to determine which colleges were giving students the most, and the least, amount of student loan debt. We've split out the rankings for public institutions, private institutions, and on an overall basis.

From there, we calculated the student loan debt statistics for each state. In the interactive map below, you can compare student loan debt on a state by state basis. By clicking a state, you will be shown the school level data for the institutions located in that particular state.

We hope this report encourages students, families, educators, and government to make smart decisions when it comes to student debt. Together, we should look to reduce the amount of student debt and alleviate the burden that student debt levies on graduates.

Key Observations

- At non-profit 4-year public and private colleges in 2015, six out of ten graduates had student debt.
- The average borrower had approximately $28,400 in student debt in the Class of 2015.
- On an overall basis, the average graduate had approximately $16,935 student debt in the Class of 2015.
- Private institutions gave average borrowers $31,710 in student debt, whereas public institutions gave average borrowers $26,872 in student debt.
- School averages for student debt at graduation in 2015 ranged from a low of $3,000 to a high of $86,262.
- State averages for student debt in 2015 ranked from a low of $18,772 per borrower in Utah, to a high of $36,864 per borrower in Connecticut.
- Of the 250 colleges with the highest amount of student loan debt per borrower, 82% of the institutions were private.
- Of the 250 colleges with the lowest amount of student loan debt per borrower, 51% of the institutions were public.

Data Methodology

LendEDU's Student Loan Debt By School By State Report was created using the newest Peterson's financial aid data. Peterson's released the fresh data for the Class of 2015 at the start of August 2016. LendEDU is the first organization to aggregate and analyze this data for the Class of 2015. The data was reported through a voluntary survey to the colleges and universities listed in the report. For reference, the data is released on a one year delay. The Class of 2016 data will not be available until the Fall of 2017.

The State level data was calculated by analyzing Peterson's financial aid data for over 1,300 colleges and universities in the United States. We only included data on the colleges and universities that reported average debt per graduate, proportion of graduates with student loan debt, number of bachelor degree recipients in 2015, number of student loan borrowers from the Class of 2015, and who were last surveyed in 2016. In addition, we only aggregated and analyzed the data for 4-year public and private non-profits.

At the state level, we assigned weights to the individual colleges within a particular state. We calculated the average student loan debt per borrower at the state level by weighting the reported average student loan debt at each college by the number of student loan borrowers at each particular institution. We calculated the proportion of student loan borrowers by weighting the reported proportion of student loan borrowers at each college by the number of bachelor degree recipients at each particular institution. At the national level, we utilized the same weighting system we used to calculate state averages. The college-level debt and proportion of borrowers was used to calculate state averages and are estimates

The average debt per graduate was calculated by compiling the total debt at each university, divided by the number of bachelor degree recipients at each particular university. The average amount of student loan debt per graduate at the college level was then weighted by the number of bachelor degree recipients in the entire class of 2015.

The data was provided on a voluntary basis at the college level by college officials. LendEDU did not audit the accuracy of the college level data. Therefore, the state level data may not be completely accurate. It does not make sense to directly compare and contrast state level data to prior state level data as revisions in methodology and the underlying data are possible.

The universities and colleges included in this study are limited to the following university function types: Four-Year Colleges, Comprehensive Higher Education Institutions, and Universities.

The universities and colleges included in this study are limited to the following main institution control types: Public State Controlled, Public State-Related, Private Nonprofit, and Private Religious

Please note, that the school level Average Student Debt per Borrower is the cumulative principal borrowed through any loan programs for the last graduating undergraduate class (all students who started at the institution as first-time students and received a bachelor's degree)–Federal Perkins, Federal Stafford Subsidized and Unsubsidized, institutional, state, private loans that the institution is aware of, etc. Includes both Federal Direct Student Loans and Federal Family Education Loans. Includes only loans (including co-signed loans) made to students who borrowed while enrolled at the institution. Excludes students who transferred in and money borrowed at other institutions, students who did not graduate or who graduated with another degree or certificate but no bachelor's degree, as well as parent loans.

Please note, that the school level Average Private Student Debt per Borrower is the cumulative principal borrowed through Private alternative loans made by a bank or lender. Includes only loans (including co-signed loans) made to students who borrowed while enrolled at the institution. Excludes students who transferred in and money borrowed at other institutions, students who did not graduate or who graduated with another degree or certificate but no bachelor's degree, as well as parent loans.

* These colleges/universities declined to respond the 2016 Peterson's survey. So, we included their most recent, pre-2016, submission to the Peterson's survey. For more information, please email support@lendedu.com. We are happy to clarify, and answer, any questions about the school level data.

Introduction

According to College Board, the average student at an in-state public school should expect to pay about $19,548 this year. And, the average student at a private nonprofit should expect to spend about $43,921 this year.

This shouldn't be a surprise. Unless you've been living under a rock, you probably know that higher education is expensive. So expensive, that the majority of college graduates are now leaving campus with a student loan statement in hand. And, the average debtor is now leaving campus with over $28,000 in student debt. To make matters worse, many of these borrowers have private student loans with high interest rates.

Student debt isn't evil. Student loans are actually a powerful tool when used correctly. However, when used in excess or inefficiently student debt can leave a serious impact on the lives of graduates.

As part of our Student Loan Debt By School By State Report, we decided to rank our nation's colleges and universities to see which schools were giving graduates the most, and the least, amount of student loan debt. To create this report and our rankings we licensed the raw financial aid data from Peterson's. It took our entire team about 50 hours to assemble and analyze the data. This data was self reported by the colleges and universities. LendEDU's Student Loan Debt By School By State Report was created using the newest Peterson's financial aid data. Peterson's released the fresh data for the Class of 2015 at the start of August 2016. LendEDU is the first organization to aggregate and analyze this data for the Class of 2015. See data methodology here.

We hope that students and families use this data before decision day. At the least, we hope that you find this data as interesting as we do. If you are looking for other statistics, check out our Student Loan Statistics page.
