Many or all of the companies featured provide compensation to LendEDU. These commissions are how we maintain our free service for consumers. Compensation, along with hours of in-depth editorial research, determines where & how companies appear on our site.

According to LendEDU's most up-to-date cost of college statistics (<https://lendedu.com/blog/average-cost-of-college-statistics/>), attending the average four-year private institution in the United States will run you $50,900 per year.

Even a public college or university will typically cost $40,940 annually for out-of-state students. Staying in-state to receive a diploma from a public university costs roughly $25,290 per year, which is cheaper, but still nothing to scoff at.

Some students are fortunate enough to be able to pay for the costs of college with savings, scholarships, or grants alone. However, LendEDU's most recent data (<https://lendedu.com/blog/average-student-loan-debt-statistics>) shows that 58 percent of college graduates leave their school with some amount of student loan debt.

On average, that amount is $28,288 per borrower. When accounting for students that did not need student loans, the average debt per graduate drops to $16,320.

It's important to know, however, that student loans can be considered a good investment if graduates use their college education to land well-paying jobs and are smart about their debt repayment.

To help students figure out whether certain colleges may be a good investment for them, LendEDU releases the College Risk-Reward Indicator (CRRI) Study each year.

Within this study, LendEDU analyzes nearly 1,000 four-year not-for-profit colleges and universities in terms of average debt per graduate and average early career pay for graduates.

The purpose of CRRI is to gauge the risks of attending a university in terms of expected debt against the expected earnings for graduates.

This year, LendEDU presents our fourth annual College Risk-Reward Indicator Report.

What Exactly is CRRI & Why Should You Consider It?

For the College Risk-Reward Indicator, LendEDU has defined the risk of attending a respective four-year college or university as the average student loan debt (<https://lendedu.com/blog/average-student-loan-debt-statistics>) per graduate at that institution. The reward of attending that same four-year college or university is the average early career pay (<https://www.payscale.com/college-salary-report/bachelors>) for graduates of that respective school. Average early career pay for graduates can also be defined as the median salary for alumni with 0-5 years of work experience.

To calculate the CRRI for each school, the following formula was used:

CRRI = Average Early Pay / Average Student Loan Debt at Graduation

But, why should this matter to you, the prospective student?

The biggest key when it comes to being financially prosperous as a young college graduate is having a low student loan debt balance and a high early career pay. Contrarily, high levels of debt and low pay is a recipe for financial hardship.

LendEDU’s 2019 CRRI Report has analyzed 985 private and public four-year colleges and universities in the United States. Schools that recorded the highest CRRI values (Princeton – 47.49) should be considered as the best risk-adjusted choices for undergraduate students. On the other hand, institutions with the lowest CRRI values (Crossroads Bible College – 0.97) should be considered the worst risk-adjusted choices for prospective students.

LendEDU’s 2019 College Risk-Reward Indicator (CRRI) Rankings

Note: In the column labeled “Rank Change,” a positive number means the institution moved up (as in a better ranking) that many spots from last year’s report. A negative number means the institution moved down (as in a worse ranking) that many spots from last year’s report. “N/A” indicates the school was not featured in the prior year’s report.

WHAT IS THE COLLEGE RISK-REWARD INDICATOR (CRRRI)?

We defined risk as the average student loan debt per graduate. We defined reward as the average early career pay, or the median salary for alumni with 0-5 years of experience. Calculating CRRRI is pretty easy:

CRRRI =

Average Early Career Pay ($)

Average Student Debt at Graduation ($)

Low student loan debt and high early career pay is a recipe for success. Whereas high student loan debt, and low early career pay is a recipe for failure.

Methodology

All data included in this report derives from two main sources. First, the average debt per graduate figure was calculated using the newest Peterson's financial aid dataset. Peterson's data was reported through a voluntary survey to the colleges and universities listed in the report. The data is released on a one year delay and reflects the Class of 2017; it is the most recent data available. Using Peterson's dataset, LendEDU was able to calculate the average debt per borrower figure at each school. That process is explained more in-depth here (<https://lendedu.com/blog/average-student-loan-debt-statistics#methodology>).

After finding the average debt per borrower figure at each school, LendEDU was then able to find the average debt per graduate figure. That figure was calculated by multiplying the average debt per borrower figure by the percentage of graduates with student debt at graduation. Average debt per graduate was used instead of average debt per borrower in order to factor in the schools where many graduates do not take on any student loan debt.

LendEDU then used PayScale's College Salary Report 2018-2019

(https://www.payscale.com/college-salary-report/bachelors) to find the median salary for graduates from each school with 0-5 years experience. That median salary figure for each respective school was then divided from the average debt per graduate figure for the same school to give LendEDU's College Risk-Reward Indicator (CRRRI) figure.
